Bangla has entirely clogged the education system, I take myself and my contemporary batches to be unfortunate to face this unavoidable misfortune. Neither our intuition nor professors are at fault that our learning process wasn't much happening or beneficial. But can't forget that "If there's a will, there's a way" and hence expecting to have regular classes both online and offline according to demands of the situation. Thank you.

Intuitive explanation and better subject knowledge
In view of the recent global situation, it is indeed difficult for even educational institutions to hold classes properly, but since I have done my first semester offline I can safely say that I was not satisfied with the teaching process at all. Most of the days we would sit in wait for the teacher arrive but they never did. Since 2020 the classes began in online mode and still not much improved. I personally felt disinterested and detached from the class because they never properly interacted. After a while they stopped online classes altogether , just a few during the first few months of a new semester. And one more thing, the teachers are not at all helpful in anyway, be it regarding some mishap in our admit cards or something else. They just turn their heads the other way every opportunity they get.
I don't know
Na
Revision should be done , previous doubt clearance should be done , online mode should be adopted
Not all teachers do online classes properly, it is better to continue the class.
